Marvin Rainwater – Conventional Country musician Marvin Rainwater's career rose on the launching pad of Arthur Godfrey's talent scout show in 1955. A songwriter, vocalist, guitar player and piano player; Rainwater is a big man with craggy good looks of his Cherokee ancestors. His songs range from lusty to just plain touching. A veteran in the entertainment field, from honky-tonk bars to TV and the London Paladium had given Rainwater a backlog of stories and anecdotes that are highly entertaining.
